Receiving.

How good are you at receiving? When offered a compliment do you smile and say thank you or do you shrug it off and point out your faults verbally or silently? Do you cover up with sarcasm? When offered a gift or assistance, do you accept with gratitude or insist you can do it yourself?

Most of us love to give. Some of us give more than others and give more than we can manage and remain feeling healthy. When we give too much without accepting in return we can often feel resentful and disappointed and as a result burn out.

If you are struggling to balance giving and receiving in your life, then you may need to look at the reasons why you find it hard to accept praise or support from others. If you struggle with low self esteem it may be difficult for you to believe that you deserve love and support from others. For our lives to be abundant we need to give and receive in balance, to keep the flow of energy going.

With xmas fast approaching this is the season for giving and receiving. Acknowledge, accept and give thanks for all the gifts and kindnesses you are offered. It is through gracious receiving that you allow someone else to feel the joy of giving.

Life Coaching enables you to learn new skills for improving self esteem and self worth and to create new belief systems that create balance and self acceptance. November special: 50% off 30minute Reiki treatment with each 60 minute Life Coaching session booked.

"Face new challenges, seize new opportunities, test your resources against the unknown and in the process, and discover your own unique potential."
